Luís Pegas

Luís began his musical studies as an oboist, studying at the National Conservatoire in Lisbon, as well as becoming principal oboist with the Band of the Portuguese Air Force. In parallel with his woodwind career, Luís continued to dedicate himself to his first love, singing, taking up vocal studies under Liliana Bizinech, and attending master classes given by internationally known names such as Max Van Egmond, the Dutch baritone and Jill Feldman, the American soprano. In London, Luís worked on his interpretation of the Baroque repertoire under Rodney Gibson at the Guildhall.

Luís has performed throughout Portugal at the invitation of the Ministry of Culture and made a number of television appearances in concerts, shows and documentaries. Acclaimed for his sympathetic interpretation of the Baroque composers, he has been invited to perform to audiences in France, Spain, Switzerland, Italy, Brazil and the United States.

He is accompanied by João Santos.

João Santos

João studied organ at Porto University and is principal organist at Leiria Cathedral, and also at the Sanctuary of Fátima during the summer months. He has won many organ prizes at home and abroad and has represented Portugal in Europe-wide projects forming part of the Socrates programme.

As well as accompanying Luís, João performs organ recitals across the whole spectrum of musical development, and has had several of his own works premiered in public performance.
